I am Edis Vrtagić, a prospective graduate software engineer completing my studies at IPIA Tuzla, currently in the final year of study.

I am currently learning web application development using technologies such as ASP.NET CORE MVC, C#, HTML, CSS, JAVASCRIPT, as well as MSSQL and MYSQL databases. It is also important to note that I am familiar with desktop application development in C# .NETFramework Windows Forms, which was a starting point for learning .NET technology.

During an internship program at IT company Comversum d.o.o Tuzla, I gained some experience in protecting clients/users through various firewall protection programs, managing customer query response systems, providing customer assistance as help desk support, and honing skills in web programming. I can also say that I am a very enthusiastic person eager for knowledge and experience, and I need to be given the opportunity for such.

For most of my projects, to showcase the application's functionality, I create video presentations which you can see on my YouTube channel providing a detailed overview of all the important aspects the application contains, while on my LinkedIn profile, you can find 'behind the scenes' of the application development process. As for myself, I can say that I am a responsible individual who ensures timely completion of tasks and obligations without significant delays.

Regarding other qualities I possess, I can highlight some of them, such as: desire for advancement, learning, creative development, assistance to socially vulnerable associations and individuals, contribution to the community, extremely strong attribute for minimalism and cleanliness of websites and desktop applications, traits such as precision, visualization... In the future, I envision myself as a young and promising individual who will perform my assigned duties in the best and most efficient manner possible, ensuring the satisfaction of the employer and the entire social community with my knowledge and creative skills.
